Requirements | Course Catalog

- Most of the courses are taught in German
- Many departments also offer courses in English
- The Institute for English and American Studies (all in English) is very interdisciplinary: Several classes could count for other fields in the humanities from politics to sociology to philosophy to film and sometimes even business
- Students from the U.S. do not have to hand in a language certificate at all
- Students from all other countries (who will study in German): hand in a language certificate that reflects your German language proficiency
- Many of our courses are not part of a fixed curriculum but are original courses planned for a specific semester. Therefore, they are not part of an unchanging course catalog and are not available until shortly before the semester starts.
- Select your courses on-site, drop and add after the semester has started
- Let us know what interests you – we will check to see which courses we could most likely offer you

Services for Exchange Students

- 4-week German Intensive Course & Welcome Week prior to each semester (March / September) - free of charge for exchange students
- Language courses for all levels also available free of charge during the semester
- Dortmund Doubles Program (you will be teamed up with German students who will help you become part of campus and city life)
- High level of support by the academic advisors and the staff of the International Office
- Guaranteed room reservation in a student dorm (on or off campus)
- Special support for students with disabilities or with a child (or children)
- Explore the Ruhr Area, Germany's largest - yet greenest - metropolitan area and visit historical cities like Bonn, Cologne or Munster
- Your enrollment includes the „Deutschlandsemesterticket“, a ticket that gives you free access to public transportation throughout Germany (high-speed trains excluded)
- Participate in many activities in and around Dortmund such as attending a soccer game of Dortmund's home team Borussia Dortmund in Germany's largest soccer stadium or visit the impressive Art Nouveau coal mine at Zeche Zollern
- You may even cross-register for courses at the Ruhr University Bochum or the University of Duisburg-Essen, both easy to reach by train

You will feel at home with us!
