Looking for a job?

When you have successfully completed your university studies here you have up to 18 months to find a job in Germany which is appropriate for your qualifications. You will have to provide evidence that you have been awarded the qualification. During these 18 months you must also be able to prove that you have enough money to cover the cost of living and that you have a sufficient health insurance cover. The exact date when your studies, for which your residence permit is valid, are seen as officially finished, depends on the study and examination regulations for your particular university and course. It is usually the day you get your final results. It is not affected by the date when you actually "exmatriculate" or deregister from the university. If you fulfil all the requirements, the purpose of your residence will be changed from "study (visit)" to "job search". During these 18 months which you have to find a job suitable for your qualifications, there are no restrictions about any other work you might do.

You will need the following documents to change the status of your residence permit from "study (visit)" to "job search" at your local Immigration Office:

- Your valid national passport (original and copy)
- A recent biometric passport photo
- Your current residence permit and the supplementary sheet (originals and copies)
- Declaration to provide financial support while you are finding a job or security deposit into a blocked account
- Evidence of your current health insurance plus deposit slip or bank statement
- Diploma, Bachelor, or Master certificate (original and copy) and written confirmation from your university stating the exact day your certificate was issued or the graduation certificate issued by your university
- Service charge of 98.00 €

Please note:

If your studies were funded by a scholarship or grant stipulating that you must return to your home country when you have finished the course, you cannot be issued with an extended residence permit.

Found a job which is appropriate for your qualifications?

Please go immediately to your local Immigration Office with the following documents:

- Valid national passport (original and copy)
- Your current residence permit and the supplementary sheet (originals and copies)
- A recent biometric passport/ID photo
- The employment contract or draft employment contract (original and copy)
- A job description from the new employer
- Service charge of 98.00 €

You can now be issued with a residence permit entitling you to take up employment if the ZAV Central Placement Services at the Federal Employment Office have approved this occupation or if there is a regulation or intergovernmental agreement stating that such approval is not required. The question of whether the Immigration Office needs to get approval from the ZAV at the Federal Employment Agency or not depends on your university degree, your occupation group and on the annual salary stated in your employment contract. The Immigration Office is bound to follow the decision of the ZAV at the Federal Employment Agency!

When you have handed in the above-mentioned documents to the Immigration Office, they will check if you can be issued with a Blue Card EU or a Residence Permit entitling you to take up employment.
